HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER.

The great popularity of this preparation, after its test of many years, should be an assurance, even to the most skeptical, that it is really meritorious. Those who have used HALL'S HAIR RENEWER know that it does all that is claimed.

It causes new growth of hair on bald heads—provided the hair follicles are not dead, which is seldom the case; restores natural color to gray or faded hair; preserves the scalp healthful and clear of dandruff; prevents the hair falling off or changing color; keeps it soft, pliant, lustrous, and causes it to grow long and thick.

HALL'S HAIR RENEWER produces its effects by the healthful influence of its vegetable ingredients, which invigorate and rejuvenate. It is not a dye, and is a delightful article for toilet use. Containing no alcohol, it does not evaporate quickly and dry up the natural oil, leaving the hair harsh and brittle, as do other preparations.

Buckingham's Dye FOR THE WHISKERS

Colors them brown or black, as desired, and is the best dye, because it is harmless; produces a permanent natural color; and, being a single preparation, is more convenient of application than any other.

AMOR IN EXCELSIS.

Had I a heart more like thine own,
As warm, and kind, and free,
A firm and fond thou shouldst have known
That heart but beats for thee!

But since so pure and fair thou art,
Thou never can be mine—
I would not have thee take a heart
So all unlike from thine!

Thy perfect heart my heart shall teach
To love thee best of all;
Dear, from thy heaven I cannot reach,
I would not have thee fall!

And what though he the gift denies
Thy heart would not refuse
Not his the praise who wins the prize,
But his who dies to lose!

IS LIFE GROWING LONGER?

An Optimistic View of the Disease and Mortality Question—Improved Chances.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

The greatest mortality exists where the people are packed together in dense masses. The introduction of steam cars and street railways has changed the character of most cities to a very great extent. London has spread with amazing rapidity, and the average mortality of the great metropolis has been measurably lowered by the relief from crowding afforded by the under and over ground railways, omnibus lines and tramways. The efficient omnibus and tramway system of Paris, with their cheap fares, enables many thousands of workingmen to live in the pure suburban district, instead of being crowded together in small apartments, as was the case in former times. The same is true so far as railways, steam and street, are concerned in our own and all other large American cities.

But the greatest cause of improved chances of life is the introduction of sewers, the paving of streets and a general diffusion of the laws of sanitation. It has been found that we may repel disease as well as an enemy at arms We build forts, fleets and arm them with improved weapons of war, to resist the warlike invader. When pestilence threatens, while perhaps we pray less, we keep our bodies, dwellings and cities more cleanly, and while some may argue that our faith in spiritual things has weakened and our hope of glory in the next world less tangible, we have at least secured a longer lease upon this.

The people of the world were never so comfortably and respectably clothed as to-day. The costumes of past centuries were picturesque and most admirable for the purposes of the artist, but the ready made clothing of our time is more reasonable in price, and if not as durable, its small cost permits frequent renewals. The tourist may strain his eyes in vain to find the peasant costumes of Europe which pictures and illustrations still preserve. The pointed hat of the Italian is seen only upon the stage. The dress of the Roman women of a generation ago, so admirable in color and artistic in design, is worn only by flower girls, which attract quite as much attention in the Eternal city as they would in St. Louis.

Harper's Monthly contains an article called "A Wild Goose Chase," a summer tour made by American artists to the northern limits of Denmark in search of the pictuesque in costume. The title shows how futile were their efforts. In Holland they still cling to the white skull caps and woolen dresses of the past because the climate demands them, but ready-made shoes of American make are crowding the wooden-shoe makers of Amsterdam and Rotterdam out of the market.

In Switzerland, the national costume is seen only upon waiter girls in fashionable hotels, for the edification of tourists. The luxury of soft and warm underclothing for winter, and of cool and comfortable fabrics for summer was unknown in former times. It has the added advantage of enabling a frequent change for purification.

A Curious Experiment.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.]

Experiments upon animals show that cells transplanted from one to another late in life will either be absorbed and removed from the body altogether, or will accept the conditions under which they find themselves, grow and reproduce themselves as if they had always formed part of that body. Thus grafting of skin, muscle and bone from animal to animal or from man to man, has been done successfully and no tumor has resulted. When a minute piece of cartilage taken from an embryonic rabbit was implanted in the eye of a young animal of the same species the results were altogether different. The wound healed kindly and at first all went on as before. After a time the bit of cartilage began to grow, and soon occupied the entire eye; after a few weeks it attained a relatively enormous size, larger than it could have grown in its original location, and produced death by pressure upon the brain of its unwilling host.

Dangers to Oyster Eaters.

[San Francisco Argonaut.]

The custom of opening oysters by the smashing process, as practiced in many restaurants, should be condemned. It is not only unsightly, but is positively dangerous to oyster eaters. We are all threatened with a very serious danger in the ever present probability of our inadvertently swallowing particles of shells bruised into the oyster by the man's carelessness. Numerous cases are upon record where the causes of mysterious illness and even death, have been found to be sharp particles of oyster shells swallowed by the patient. When ordering oysters for home use, insist upon their being opened by "stabbing." If served on the shell they then present an appetizing appearance, the under shell is whole, and the danger spoken of is entirely averted.

The Rug System.

[Southern Trade Gazette.]

We are decidedly in favor of the rug system of covering floors. It is, hygienically and otherwise, a very wise plan; the rugs may be thoroughly shaken without employing an army of workmen to take up, beat and put down again.

Peculiarities of the Oyster.

[Exchange.]

An oyster has a stomach and a heart. In American it has sex, but none in Europe. We have male and female oysters on the American coast. Those of Europe combine the two sexes in one animal.

EVERY-DAY TRAGEDY.

[Theodora" in Detroit Free Press.]

My home is just off one of the great thoroughfares, and many people pass my door daily with whom I have no acquaintance.

These persons are not exactly those who are called day laborers, but belong to that great class of working people who are employed in laboratories and factories, in telegraph and telephone offices, and in and about railway stations and the like. Among them all was one man whom for many months I noticed specially. It was not that his face was in any way remarkable for beauty or attractiveness. Indeed had it not been for the expression it might well have been called a very ordinary one—but there was something in the steady eyes and in the sweetness and strength about the mouth which I found very interesting.

When I first saw him he was already verging upon middle age, but his step was still sprightly, and his honest eyes looked out bravely and cheerfully from a friendly countenance.

There was occasionally in his company a young woman, who evidently came out to meet him. This happened oftenest in spring and summer evenings when the days here are at their longest and finest. I used often then to watch for them, for it was pleasant to see the shining of the man's countenance and the shy smile with which the girl would turn to listen to him. I needed to be no clairvoyant to discern how matters stood between them nor to guess that each had chosen wisely and well. As the days slipped onward I perceived by changes in their manner that my young people had been married. The girl came now almost daily to meet the man. She no longer held herself shyly aloof, but leaned openly upon his arm as she walked beside him. They were always talking eagerly and confidentially together, and I could well fancy the little domestic details she was giving him, or imagine the story of business worries or successes which he poured into the ear which listened so sympathetically.

After a time it seemed to me that the world was going hardly with my young people. Her dress, which had always been plain and unobstrusive, now grew more and more simple, and I missed the bits of ribbon or dainty adornment, which had heretofore made it fresh and jaunty. My friend's face, too, grew to have anxious lines about it. I noticed how his straw hat did duty until late in the autumn, and how shining and threadbare was his clothing, with all the seams showing white about them. It pained me, too, as the weather grew severe to observe how scantily he was protected from the winds of winter, and how he strove with comforter and mittens to supply the place of the much-needed great-coat. But the shabbier grew my friend's exterior the more noble and beautiful became his countenance, and the very soul of patience and courage seemed to look out at me from his earnest eyes.

For a time I lost sight of the young woman, but at last one day she came, walking slowly and dragging, with some effort, a baby carriage behind her. I was shocked to see the changes a few weeks had wrought in her appearance.

Her eyes were shining so brilliantly, such a vivid hectic spot burned upon either cheek and the cough was so hollow and frequent that I felt my heart sink within me. It may seem strange that I made no effort to know personally these people in whom I was so deeply interested, but class distinctions are the most impassable of barriers here in republican America. I knew that they desired no help or charity, but would have resented bitterly any advance which they might have construed into officious interference or even offensive patronage on my part. So I was forced to content myself with watching and pitying them from afar. The poor baby was always so frail and delicated a creature, with seemingly so loose a hold on life, that I was not surprised when very soon the young mother came walking alone and desolate and drawing no baby carriage behind her. Her dress was a cheap black print, and the man when he met her had on his shabby hat a scrap of rusty black crape by way of mourning.

After this they showed even more plainly the pinch of poverty and I could well fancy how their little hoard had dwindled with the expenses of the baby's illness, death and funeral. The poor young mother began to shrink and dwindle rapidly also, and seemed almost to vanish away like the snow in spring time. She came very seldom now to meet her husband, and when she did so leaned heavily upon his arm and walked slowly and wearily, and the face was drawn and white which had so lately been wreathed with smiles and dimples.

And very soon she came no more to meet him. I still saw him almost daily, but he had suddenly grown old and stooping. His youth seemed to have dropped away from him like a garment. His hair grew gray and scanty almost in a night season, and his face which had long been so pathetic, now appeared to me almost sublime in its pain and patience. No youthful comeliness could have seemed to me half so touching or beautiful as that worn face with its deep lines of suffering and fortitude.

I know that this was but a very simple, every-day tragedy which I had been watching Just a common workingman's love and heart-break, with nothing more terrible in it than a sickly baby's dying and a poor young woman's wasting away in consumption, but, after all, the great truths of love and death, the agony of passion, despair and heart-break are much the same to each one of us. I daresay no knight of old loved better or more truly than did my shabby workingman, or fought more valiantly against the monster that beset him, or felt a keener pang than he did when his life lay in ruins about him. I almost think the poor man's sorrow must have been the keener.

What must it have been to him to have seen his dear one slipping away from him while he had not even the ability to supply a little luxury to smooth her path downward—to feel that her mortal pangs and dying were rendered even more bitter by the constant pain and pressure of pecuniary anxieties. What must he not have suffered when forced by the constant necessities of daily toil to give up the last golden hours he might have spent in her sweet presence! No wonder the man's face grew to have the look of a martyr's, and, each day, as I watched its changing, my heart ached for pity.

It is long now since I have seen my unknown friend's face. He has vanished from his old places, and I have never known the name he bore nor what was his end or destiny. About the time that he disappeared from my vision I chanced to read in a daily paper a brief account of a workingman who bravely saved a little child from trampling horsehoofs, but received himself a blow of which he died soon afterward.

I like to believe that this was my friend and that he thus went home to his wife and little one. It is pleasant to believe that for this good soldier the battle, though sharp, was brief, and the rest and reward long and certain. His simple heart would, I am sure, marvel greatly could he know the many thoughts I have had concerning him, or could he be brought to realize the half which his strong and patient countenance has sometimes been to me. Life is full of obscure battle-fields, and it is not the magnitude of the strife which matters, but the way in which we bear ourselves, and the side upon which we are found fighting. As for the rest, it is of very small importance whether the world looks on admiring or whether only God and ourselves know where and how we meet and face the enemy.

The Beggars of Paris.

[Paris Cor. Chicago Tribune.]

Workhouses do not exist. Paupers are obliged to choose between crime, starvation, the hospital, or the depot de mendicite. The few charitable night refuges existing in Paris are utterly inadequate to the calls made upon them. Moreover, in none can beggars hope for more than three nights' sleep and a crust of bread in the morning. The French law can hardly be said to recognize beggars. The police are instructed to treat them as criminals. They lock them up and let them loose again, and if, after that, the paupers persist in being penniless they expiate their obstinacy by reimprisonment. There are 20,000 poor wretches in Paris who at night have not a bed to creep into. After being locked up three or four times they get desperate, and when starving men get desperate they become dangerous.

An ingenious clause has, therefore, been inserted in the habitual criminals bill voted recently, which it is hoped may rid French society of paupers altogether. All persons found begging four times are to be assimilated with thieves and murderers. In the delicate phraseology of the bill, they will be relegated to Cayenne, where, doubtless, the peculiar climate will soon settle them. Criminals twice convicted and sentenced to hard labor will be relegated to the same place instead of being, as heretofore, transported to New Caledonia.

Painting the Babies.

[New York Cor. Chicago Tribune.]

A year or more ago a lovely little child, a little girl of perhaps 4, approached me in a large bric-a-brac shop, and while her mother was engaged in a distant part of the building I endeavored to entertain the little creature by showing her some marbles of little children. "How white they are," she said; "what makes them so white?" "Because they are of marble," I answered; marble children don't have pretty pink cheeks and golden hair as you have, you know." "My cheeks are painted and my hair is goldened; it is truly ruby," said this precocious young maiden; and, sure enough, as we came into the strong light I could see the color in her little face was as artificial as was the sunshiny hue in the curls. What are we coming to, I should like to know, if out of the mouths of babes and sucklings the folly of their too-frivolous mothers is to be made manifest.

Robbing the Mails.

[Boston Budget "Saunterer."]

It has been often asked how thieves who purloin money from letters manage to find out the missives that contain enclosures of value. I happened to meet a gentleman the other day who has had considerable experience in post-office affairs, and the matter was explained by him in this way: By bringing envelopes suddenly in front of a bright light, the dishonest person who wishes to become a mail robber is generally able to detect a folded bill, and is thus spared the trouble of opening letters which do not contain what he is seeking for. Envelopes smoked on the side where they are fastened have frequently been discovered, and if any of our readers receive any with this mark upon them that they may be almost certain that they have passed through the hands of some one who has an itch-palm.

Conquerors from Persia.

[Boston Budget.]

Cyrus, the first historical monarch of Persia, not only conquered all resistance, notably that of Nebuchadnezzar and his Babylonian dominion, and of the Lydian king Crœsus, but carried his victorious arms even to the Ægean sea; so that Asia, in so far as it was known to Europe, was synonymous with Persia. Cambyses, successor to Cyrus, crushed the oldest power of the world, that of the Pharaohs; and the third Persian king crossed the Bosphorus, that he might embody in the colossal Persian empire the eastern lands of Europe and the borders of the Danube.

Fate of Nihilists.

[Exchange.]

Leo Hartman tells James Redpath that of 3,000 men and women whom he knew personally, enrolled with him as Nihilists between 1876 and 1878, only two are alive. "By alive," he explained, "I mean free—not in prison." Revolutionists once in a Russian prison are the same as dead.

Drawing in English Schools.

[Chicago Herald.]

Linear drawing has been introduced, by recent enactment, into all the elementary schools of England. The theory is that a knowledge of this kind of drawing is useful in almost every kind of trade or handicraft.

Baron Nestrol: I can understand why people attend a ball, but why anybody should give a ball is something entirely beyond my comprehension.

SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE,

H. H. GRANICE ---------- EDITOR

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1885.

FARM LABORERS' UNION.

There has recently been organized in this State a Farm Laborers' Union, having for its object the bettering of the condition of the farm laborer and the discouragement of the employment of the Chinese on our farms. The organization, as a preliminary step, is sending out representatives to talk to the people, make its object known and obtain accessions to its ranks. On Saturday evening last, P. H. McKeever, who is working in the interest of the Union in this section, addressed quite a crowd in front of the Sonoma House. In the course of his remarks he said that the farmer should give preference to the white man as against the Chinese, in which case there would be fewer tramps. He favored shorter hours, home comforts and less whisky for the laboring man. He claimed that the farmer ought to make a distinction between the tramp who roams around the country out of pure laziness and the man who carried his blankets on his back in search of work. As a whole, his remarks were very conservative, and were well received by his hearers.

ONE CAUSE OF HARD TIMES.

Says a contemporary: "We wonder how many of our readers ever stop to think if they are not in a measure responsible for hard times. Did it ever strike you that a great improvement might be made in the business of your town if you would spend your money at home instead of going to the city for your merchandise? Did you ever take the trouble to compare your city bills with those of your own local merchants, considering the time and expense of going and coming? We venture the assertion that by comparing bills you will find that in most cases you save money by buying at home. It is a fact that a large portion of trade which rightly belongs at home is carried to San Francisco, and so long as this continues times will be hard and money scarce. Live and let live is the true principle upon which to work. The growth of your town enchances the value of your property. Build up the town by giving its merchants, tradesmen and its newspaper your patronage, and you will do a good turn for yourself. Nothing is made by slighting your neighbors and patronizing those in whom you can feel no interest.

ACCORDING to the new code of rules of practice governing the General Land Office, which went into effect on the 1st inst., an important departure from the old practice was made in respect to the initiation of contests. Under the old rule, only a party in interest could bring a contest, except in the case of an abandoned homestead or a forfeited timber culture entry. The new rules extend to everybody the right to initiate contests against "the party making any entry, filing or other claim, under the laws of Congress, relating to public lands, for any sufficient cause affecting the legality or validity of the claim." The power of officers to order hearings in certain classes of contests is extended by the new rules to all cases wherein an entry has not been perfected and no certificate has been issued as a basis for a patent.

ABOUT the luckiest man having a valley vineyard, says the "Independent Calistogian," is Tom Hopper of Yountville. He receives twenty-five dollars per ton for all his grapes, in accordance with a ten-year contract made four years ago when grapes were selling for $30 and $35 per ton. His neighbors at the time thought he had made a great mistake.

W. L. DILKS, who for many years lived at Nelson Point, Plumas county, recently suicided by leaping into an old volcano crater. He is said to have often expressed a wish that no one should ever follow his remains to the grave, and he doubtless took this means to carry out his desire.

THE City Council of Los Angeles has passed an amended license ordinance. Saloons will be taxed $50 each, per month—formerly the rate was $10; wholesale liquor dealers, $20; brewers and distillers, $10; circuses, $1,000 per day.

FAILURE OF DR. BAUER'S MERCURIAL REMEDY.

F. W. Morse, Special Inspector of the Viticultural Commission, has officially announced the failure of Dr. Bauer's mercurial remedy. The principal experiments were made in a vineyard about one mile east of Sonoma and the mixture was tested in many ways, but it had no traceable effects in arresting the development of phylloxera. The failure of this last remedy adds one more to the many remedies that have sprung up as being dead sure things for the destruction of the devastating insect. Mercury, as a practical phylloxera-destroyer, will now have to be cast aside as has been bi-sulphide of carbon, sulpo-carbonate of potassium, copperas, coal-tar and hundreds of other oft-tried remedies. In view of the untiring and unsuccessful research, both in this country and France, for a phylloxera-exterminating remedy, we think it about time to admit that man is completely powerless to kill the insect in sufficient numbers to ever rid a vineyard of their presence by the use of insecticides. He can, however, prove the victor by resisting its attacks by grafting upon certain varieties of native American vines, the roots of which, experience has proven beyond a doubt, are proof against the pest. The general resistibility of purely native American vines is a verification of the law which Darwin has laid down, and expressed as "The Survival of the Fittest," and to these must our vineyardists turn their attention if they wish to enjoy immunity from the attacks of the dreaded phylloxera.

CINCHED!

Although vigorous efforts were made by Messrs. Coulter, O'Hara and Ellis, the committee appointed by the Board of Supervisors to wait upon the State Board of Equalization at Sacramento, to prevent a raise of the assessment roll of Sonoma county, that body has seen fit to cinch our taxpayers to the extent of increasing the rate 10 per cent.

PERSONAL.

Our former townsman, David Burris, now of Traver, Tulare county, was lately confined to his bed for seven weeks with intermittent fever. He is somewhat improved at present, though very weak yet.

Supervisor Houser was deprived of his office last Tuesday by an order of the Superior Court, made by Judges Temple and Pressley.

Mine host of Jones' Hotel, Wm. Jones, and the INDEX-TRIBUNE scribe took a trip to the upper part of the valley last Monday, and lassoed a number of new subscribers.

Rev. E. H. King will preach in the Methodist Episcopal church on Sunday (to-morrow), at 7:30 P. M. No preaching in the morning. All are cordially invited.

A sharp shower of rain fell in the valley at an early hour Thursday morning. It was sufficient to lay the dust and made travelling agreeable for the day.

Frank Luttrell of Glen Ellen, while chasing some cattle on his father's ranch, one day last week, stumbled and fell, breaking one of his ankles. He is now going around on crutches, but will soon be able to cast them aside.

Henry Raschen, of the Union Hotel, will furnish the supper on the occasion of the Fancy Jockey Party, which takes place at Union Hall next Thursday evening. This announcement is sufficient guarantee that the ball supper will be all that can be desired.

Judge Small of Glen Ellen has two immense pumpkins growing in his garden. They are about the size of a man's head after he has made the rounds of the different wine cellars in the valley.

Glen Ellen is badly in need of a lock-up. We trust the Supervisors at their next meeting will consider this matter and provide that place with a proper building for incarcerating prisoners pending their examination before the Justice of the Peace.

A large delegation of members of Morning Star Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, Petaluma, paid a fraternal visit to Valley of the Moon Chapter in this place, on Friday evening of last week. They were serenaded by the Sonoma Brass Band and otherwise made welcome.

Miss A. H. Rathbun has secured the agency for Sonoma township of "General Grant's Memoirs." This work is sold only by subscription and, therefore, those of our people who wish to possess themselves of this valuable book, should not hesitate to put their names down as subscribers when waited upon by Miss Rathbun. It is the genuine work.

MR. EDITOR—Dear Sir: Kindly allow me space in your columns to contradict the report that I am about to leave Sonoma to reside in San Francisco. Those who circulated such reports will greatly oblige by letting me know when my removal is to take place, as I have no knowledge of it.

DR. F. MCTAGGART.

Sonoma is greatly in need of a brick kiln. To any one understanding the burning of brick an excellent opportunity is now offered for making money. We understand there are several parties in town anxious to put up brick buildings, and will do so if some one with the requisite capital and a knowledge of the business will start a brick kiln.

The subject to be debated upon at the Clay Literary Society next Monday evening will be, "Resolved, That the statesman is more beneficial to the civilized world than the poet." Affirmative, B. F. Campbell, assisted by H. H. Wikoff; negative, L. Breitenbach, assisted by Dr. F. McTaggart.

Messrs. Miner & Knight, who recently purchased a portion of the Geary place, are the kind of people we need in the Sonoma Valley. At the present time they are engaged in erecting a fine two-story dwelling, barns and outhouses, and when these are completed the place will present a very pleasing appearance. The dwelling house is being built under the supervision of Mr. Miner, who is a first-class architect and builder.

By reference to advertisement in another column, it will be seen that Mr. F. Ehrlich is prepared to manufacture grapes into wine on shares, or for three cents per gallon. He also guarantees to keep all wines separate and sell them to the best advantage. Mr. Ehrlich's offer is a liberal one and would seem to solve the question of healing the little differences which exist at the present time between the grape-grower and wine-maker.

Arrest, Escape and Capture.

On Thursday of last week, a Chinese entered the house of H. F. Tarrant, near Glen Ellen, during the absence of the male members of the family and after terrifying and running the women out of the house, proceeded in the most nonchalant manner possible to help himself to whatever suited his fancy. After satisfying his thieving propensities he left. His little exploit reaching the ears of Constable Gibson shortly after, he was pursued and arrested by that officer. There being no lock-up in Glen Ellen, the Chinese was incarcerated in an out-house in the rear of the constable's residence, pending his examination, which was set for the following morning. During the night, however, the wily Chinese succeeded in effecting his escape by prying off the boards of his temporary quarters. The escape was discovered the next morning and Constable Gibson started in pursuit and before night he had captured his man on the Napa road. He was brought back to Glen Ellen, and to make sure of his not escaping a second time a huge log chain was brought into requisition, and the Chinese securely chained to one end of the same, while the other was made fast to the rafters of the Postoffice building. "Too muchee log chain," was the protest the Chinaman entered, but it availed him not as Constable Gibson was determined to make a sure thing of holding his prisoner this time. The next morning the offending Chinaman was taken before Judge Small, who kindly beaming down upon the celestial, considerately gave him thirty days.

Congregational Church Social.

The Congregational church held its regular monthly social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Craig, on Tuesday evening. The literary exercises consisted of a vocal solo, "Shells of the Ocean," by Miss Ella Dey; recitation, "The Tramp," Miss Rose Wilson, and a sacred song by Miss Belle Ewell. Games, moonlight and chorus singing combined, helped to make the evening an enjoyable one to all present. Refreshments were served as usual. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Shaw, Mrs. Dunn, Mrs. Ellis, Mrs. Mumphries, Mrs. Appleton, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Choate. Misses Josie Dunn, M. Mower, A. Pemberton, M. Caldwell, Grace Johnson, Belle Ewell, Cora Perkins, Geneva McTaggart, Rosa Wilson, Lillie Dunn, L. Kalmer, Lottie Morris, Janet Cooper, Ella Dey, Louisa Douglas and Minnie Cook. Messrs. T. Cooper, T. Ellis, J. Morris, H. H. Wikoff, Robert Dunn, James Wilson, Frank Kalmer, Robert Douglas, John Ellis, A. Landsborough, Lucian Johnson, Dr. McTaggart, Albert Dunn and Eddie Ewell.

A Man Shot.

[Petaluma Courier, Sept. 23rd.]

Last Saturday night Bob Logan, a hay baler, was shot by Frank Martin. The difficulty occurred on the old White ranch in Vallejo township and about 1½ miles below this city. The shooting is said to have been caused by a woman with whom Martin is living on the White ranch. Logan was shot with a pistol in the mouth, the ball coming out on the side of his neck, making a serious but not necessarily fatal wound. From all we have been able to learn, the shooting was a most unfortunate occurrence for both parties. Logan, it is said, was not armed at the time or even anticipated a difficulty. Martin was arrested soon after the shooting by Marshal Blume, and at this time of writing is in jail here waiting an examination.

New Real Estate Firm.

J. J Henderson and Henry Raschen have recently entered into partnership, as real estate brokers. They have fitted up an office in Union Hall, where they will be pleased to see those having lands and houses to dispose of, or those who are looking out for an investment. They have a number of fine properties for sale which they will dispose of at a bargain. Messrs. Henderson & Raschen are live business men, and we predict for the new firm a rushing business when they get well under way.

Dusty Streets.

Dust on the streets facing the Plaza is becoming a perfect nuisance and something ought to be done in the way of sprinkling our streets. The attention of the City Trustees is called to this matter and we trust, if it lies within their power, that they will provide a street-sprinkler and hire a man to run it. The water will cost nothing as the railroad company has very generously offered water from their tank for street sprinkling purposes gratis.

A grand Fancy Jockey Cap Invitation Party will be given at Union Hall by Professor Marsden and his scholars on Thursday October 1st. This party promises to be one of the most largely attended and enjoyable affairs that has ever taken place. *

CLOVERDALE HAPPENINGS.

[Reveille, Sept. 19th.]

Coyotes are doing considerable damage on the Caslamayomi grant. So far John Caldwell and Wm. Hixon are the principal sufferers.

The winery at Geyserville commenced crushing grapes some two weeks ago and has been paying from seven to fifteen dollars per ton.

[Pacific Sentinel, Sept. 19th.]

The hod carriers on the new brick building struck for higher wages Wednesday. Their places were filled by other men, however, and they are now looking for another job.

At the winery in this place we understand that Mr. DeTurk has agreed to pay our vineyardists only $8 per ton for Mission, etc., and $14 per ton for Zinfandel and other varieties of foreign grapes.

Luke Lynch, well known to the young men of this place, met with a serious accident in Lower Lake one day this week. He got into a difficulty with the China cook at the hotel there, in which the Chinaman attacked him with a butcher knife. In trying to save himself from being carved, Luke caught the knife by the blade which was drawn through his hand, cutting it so badly it is feared he will lose the use of it, and maybe will lose the hand entirely.

PETALUMA AFFAIRS.

[Courier.]

Quail are more plentiful in this section this season than for years past.

Jerry Lafferty killed a four-point buck on Sonoma mountain last week.

A flock of quail passed through this city last Monday morning, bound west. They made noise enough as they passed to wake up sleepy people.

Last Thursday, Antone George, a Portugese in the employ of Frank Perry of Two Rock, was thrown from a cart and in falling was badly kicked about the face by the horse.

Dealers report a good demand for hay here, one dealer having sold within a week 800 bales for Cloverdale and 1,500 for Santa Rosa. The demand is increasing as the winter approaches.

Patrick Sweeney, who owns a farm on San Antonio creek, one night last week shot and killed five coons in one pear tree. The night before he killed three skunks under the same tree. The fruit has evidently attracted the varmints.

Cheap Cash Store.

Read the advertisement of W. A. Smith's Cheap Cash Store, which appears in these columns this week. In order to send his store off with a boom he is offering at a sacrifice dry goods, millinery and fancy goods. A long-felt want is filled by this store. Ladies desiring millinery or anything else in Mr. Smith's line will save both time and money by giving him a call. Mr. Smith comes here to catch the trade that now goes to San Francisco, Petaluma and Napa, and he is going to do it if low cash prices and fair dealing count for anything in the community. Remember the location of the new store, Napa street, adjoining Jones' Hotel. *

A Hen Convention.

Mr. J. M. McCann of Bridgeport, W. Va., a contributor to poultry journals of the United States and Canada, and a large chicken raiser, says that if St. Jacobs Oil is mixed with dough and fed to poultry suffering from chicken cholera, and all that are able to swallow will be restored to health, and if saturated pills are forced down the throats of those that cannot swallow they will flap their wings and crow in your face.

SANTA ROSA NEWS.

[Democrat.]

One of the prisoners in the County Jail is an artist of no small merit. With a broomstick placed in the fire until the end is charred into a coal he has drawn on the entire side of the prison wall, real and natural picturings of landscapes, mills, waterfalls, etc.

A letter received by Prof. Smyth, from the teacher of the Bodega district school, brings the intelligence that the school house in that district was burned on Thursday, the 17th inst. It is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, no fire having been used in the building for months. The house and contents were totally destroyed.

Notwithstanding the fact that woolen mills in several towns in the State have shut down Mr. Walker, of the Santa Rosa works, informs us that his mill is doing a good business. They are now employing fifty hands, and their pay roll amounts of something over $350 per week. They are confining themselves mostly to woolen goods and flannels at present, and find a market for the same in San Francisco.

Intelligence reached here of a bad accident which befell Misses Frankie and Mary Martin, daughters of Prof. Martin, who was for years President of the old Christian College in this city. The Martin family removed from Santa Rosa several years ago, and have been residing ever since in some part of Southern California. At the time of the accident the two young ladies were riding out in a carriage, when the horses became frightened and ran with great speed, overturning the vehicle, killing Mary instantly and breaking the back of Frankie. The latter is yet lingering in great suffering between life and death. She is not expected to live.

An altercation occurred between Andrew Hart and Fred. Smith, in a Chinese opium den on Second street, on Friday evening, when the latter gave the former a severe cut just under the left eye, and shortly after when Mr. Hart left the premises fired five shots at him when only a distance of twenty-five feet, neither of which took effect. Mr. Hart claims that Mr. Smith and his companions enticed a dog which he had borrowed, and which was with him, to follow them from the street into this house, and that after he went in there for the purpose of getting the dog a few hot words ensued with the above result. After Hart left the premises, remarking that he would see them later, he was surprised at being followed up, and as soon as the first shot was fired began to beat a hasty retreat around the nearest corner.

HEALDSBURG NOTES.

[Enterprise, Sept. 19th]

Feltmeyer & Stammer of Geyserville will make about 20,000 gallons of wine this year.

C. Ed. Jones returned from Mountain View Ranch on Thursday, having killed one buck weighing 90 pounds, caught 320 trout, and captured 60 pounds of honey in one bee tree.

Mrs. John Richie, a new comer to this place, died suddenly of heart disease, last Saturday, while writing at a table. She was buried on the following day by the members of Rebecca Degree Lodge in Oak Mound cemetery.

One of our Healdsburg merchants displayed some business energy this week. Being informed by telegraph of a sudden rise of two cents in the price of sugar he procured the services of various friends and bought up in small lots nearly all the sugar in town before the other merchants were aware of the advance. By this stroke he became virtually master of the sugar market here and having bought in his sugar at the old prices reaped quite a profit on the transaction.

There is considerable talk in the upper end of the county of putting on a line of stages between Cloverdale and Petaluma and making connections with the steamer Gold. Peter Donahue's charges seem to rather oversize the pockets of the people who have been disappointed in their crops. One man from near Geyserville recently went down by team to the city and brought up a wagon and figured that by using his own team and patronizing the opposition boat, he had saved just $35 on freights and fares. Quite a benefit to a country is a railroad just like this.

AT FORTY-EIGHT.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

At twilight, vis-a-vis with fate,
She sat, unhappy and alone.
Her milestones numbered forty-eight,
No other pathway crossed her own.

No tender voice robbed age of gloom,
No smiling faces cheered her sight,
There only glided through the room
The phantom of a dead delight.

"How drear and dim the pathway seems,"
She said, "to me at forty-eight:
Long since I wakened from my dreams—
I seek for naught, for nothing wait.

"I am like one who blindly gropes
Towards fading sunsets in the west;
Behind me lie youth's shattered hopes;
What can I ask for now but rest?

"Some joys I sought with heart on fire
Would find me now, but all too late—
I watched ambition's funeral pyre
Burn down ere I was forty-eight."

Too sad to weep, too tired to pray,
Alone she sat at forty-eight,
While sunset colors paled to gray—
How desolate! how desolate!

THE BITER BITTEN.

"Fine stone that you wear," said a Philadelphia bartender to a customer the other day, according to the "News." "Oh, its nothing but paste," said the stranger, with a laugh. "There's no paste about that," said the bartender, incredulously. "That's what it is," said the stranger, carelessly. "I took it for a debt of $75. The setting, you see, is rather fine, but the whole thing is not worth $100." The bartender looked at the stone again and again. The light of his bosom looked yellow beside it. That night he dreamed about it. Next day, when the stranger appeared at his customary time, he said to him, rather nervously: "Have you sufficient confidence in me to loan me that ring for a day? I would like to show it to a friend of mine who admires such things." "Certainly," said the other, and he removed the ring from his finger. The bartender took the stone to a jeweller. The verdict was: "One of the finest diamonds I have seen. It is worth $1,000, and I will pay that sum for it." "But," said the troubled Ganymede, "the owner says it is paste," and he then told the entire story. "Either the owner or the man he got it from is a fool. The stone is worth the sum I mentioned, and if you can buy it for less I will give you that much money for it."

Next day the man of spirits returned the ring to its owner saying, carelessy: "I would like to have that." "It's not for sale," was the brief reply. After a few drinks the bartender said to his newly-made friend: "See here, I want that ring, and I will give you $200 for it." "Nonsense," was the reply. "It's not worth that. I tell you positively it's nothing but paste. Besides, I don't care to part with it." The proposal to purchase and the refusal to sell were continued in this way until the bartender had offered $600, when the other said: "You tempt me too much. But I fail to understand why you should be willing to pay such a large sum for a paste stone. Here it is. Give me the money. But remember the stone is paste."

"That's all right," said the delighted alcoholic concoctor. "I'm simply stuck on it—that's all." He hurried to the jeweller with his prize. "Here is the ring," he said, "give me the thousand dollars." The man looked at it, and simply said: "Why, this is nothing but paste."

Of course the scheme was at once laid bare. The rings had been exchanged. The chagrined bartender almost wept. He never expected to see the stranger again, but he had been dealing with no ordinary confidence man. To his surprise he walked in again the next morning as quiet-looking as usual, but his fingers bare of ornament.

"See here," said the bartender, excitedly, "that stone was paste!"

"That's what I told you," was the quiet response. "Give me a brandy sour!"

A Tennessee young man recently sent a fervent note to his girl, asking her to elope. The old man, however, guarded her so carefully that she was unable to do so. But she managed to send him a nice muskmelon. The "cantelope" told him just how matters stood.

FANCY WORK.

Dozens of beautiful and useful articles may be made at home, but many a woman denies herself these luxuries because she does not know how to make them, and cannot afford to pay three times the cost of materials to hire them made.

Here is something easy and very convenient—an 'Hour-glass Stand.' Get a large stick of wood, twenty-seven inches long. For the top, nail on the bottom of a cracker-barrel; for the bottom, the cover of a candy-pail. You can get either the barrel or the pail and cover for a dime. Then take two breadths of cloth (dress-goods cambric, or turkey-red calico, as you choose), each a yard long, and sew them together like a dress-shirt, putting a hem in at each end. Run a draw-string in each hem, slip it over your frame, and tie the strings. Tie a bright ribbon around the centre in a long bow. A cover, crocheted of white or colored tidy-cotton, is nice for the top; or you can cut one out of heavy cloth (it need not be new), and notch or scallop the edges. It will look still nicer if you work a little figure in the centre, with bright-colored zephyr, and a border all around the outside. Nothing is prettier for this than "feather-stitch," which I will describe some other time. It makes a beautiful border for stand covers, shams, foot-stool covers, and lambrequins. Chain-stitch is also a pretty edge, but that is so common it is not necessary for me to describe it at all.—Carol Hea in "Tid-Bits."

SCHOLARLY COLORED WAITER.

Most of the waiters of the States are colored college students from Howard University, Washington. My waiter told me this morning that he had finished geometry and mathematics, Livy, Cæsar and Virgil in Latin, and the Anabasis in Greek.

The other day at dinner Prof. Henry of Harvard College was canning a line of Virgil's hexameter to illustrate the meter to a rich business friend who had not read the classics.

"Longfellow's 'Evangeline, and Virgil's epices,'" said the Professor, "were written in the same hexameter. Now the first line of Virgil is scanned like this: 'Arma —virumpque.'"

"Why, I declare," he said, hesitating, "I have forgotten the old, familiar words."

"Shall I give them to you?" asked the waiter, politely.

"You?" asked the Professor, in astonishment.

"Yes, sir," said the black man. They are—"Arma virumpque cano Troiae qui primus ab oris."

"Great guns!" exclaimed the business millionaire, "where did you learn Latin?"

"At college, sir," said the waiter.

When the rich man found out all the poor negro's acquirement and ambition and poverty, he asked him how much it cost him a year at Howard University.

"It cost $130 a year, and I've got three years to go."

"Well, here," he said, "is $500. You can keep the change, and when you get through come and see Nathaniel Ruggles in Dodge City, Kan."

"A LOCAL PREACHER.
"San Francisco, Cal."

"I feel like sounding its praise on the housetops.
"HON. CHAS. A. SUMNER."

WON'T BLISTER.—Caloric Vita Oil takes the place of all pain killing lotions or liniments, poultices or blisters, and while its penetrating, heating, healing and vital action is tenfold more powerful than either, it will not chafe or blister.

Dr. J. Winchester, Columbia, Cal., says: "Have used Vita Oil with the most beneficial results; can endorse without hesitation your claim. As a family remedy for the relief of pain it has no equal in the world. In our household it has become indispensable."

"With a thankful heart I acknowledge the great merit of Dr. Smith's Caloric Vita Oil. I had suffered over 30 years with Bronchitis and was seriously threatened with lung disease. I had tried all remedies and all climates with occasional temporary relief, but no cure. The use of two small bottles made me a sound man.
"A BANK OFFICER."

A prominent druggist in San Francisco:—"We hazard nothing in saying it is the best pain curer and healing remedy ever used or known. It acts quickly, promptly and certainly in relieving pain. Hundreds of sufferers have been relieved by it, to the wonder of thousands of their friends. Its sales have doubled nearly every month."

"It will do the heaviest work of any medicine I ever handled, and quick, too."
A PHYSICIAN.

One hundred and thirty-six wholesale and retail druggists in San Francisco and Oakland are selling Caloric Vita Oil, and not a single complaint has ever reached us.

"I am 72. Had suffered over 40 years with rheumatism, but Dr. Smith's Caloric Vita Oil cured me after every known remedy failed.
"AN OLD VETERAN."

All that is asked for Vita Oil is a single trial. Its great merit for the relief of pain can never be known except by the sufferer who has tried it.

PHYSICAL SPORTS.—If pedestrians, gymnasts, ball-players, oarsmen and those engaged in the rougher pastimes (sports) would prevent soreness, lameness, contraction of the muscles, or other injuries received from the nature of their calling, they should rub freely with Caloric Vita Oil. No athlete ever used it but was ready and willing to sound its praise.

Full directions for using Vita Oil in a variety of diseases accompany each bottle.

Vita Oil is to be had of all leading druggists in San Francisco and generally throughout the Pacific Coast, and by many small dealers where there is no druggist. It will soon be found indispensable in every family. Price 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

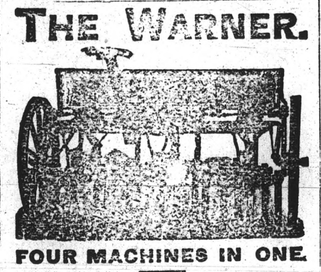
THE WARNER.



FOUR MACHINES IN ONE.

A Broadcast Seeder; A Field Cultivator and Harrow; A Two-Horse Corn Cultivator, and a One-Horse Corn Cultivator.

Each one of these above named implements, combined in the one represented in the illustration, is an admirable implement for the purpose intended, combining more valuable features than any other Sulky Harrow and worth twice as much. Its Superiority also over any of the so-called "Floating, Spring-Tooth Harrows" is so great that no farmer can afford to buy the latter to save a few dollars difference in cost. The WARNER is far more economical than such. Farmers are respectfully urged to examine the Warner Sulky Spring-Tooth Harrow and Seeder before being induced to purchase any other and inferior substitute for it. ☞ Send for Illustrated Descriptive Circulars and Price List.
